

Short Course State 2017

Defining Success

Magicians depend on the audience to see what they want them to see to divert attention from what they are actually doing- this is required for the illusion to be a success. When watching the athletes perform at state meet you can sometimes miss all that is occurring in the way of success. It is natural to focus on an event winner or a record setter while they swim. As coaches we certainly are happy when the swimmers perform at such an advanced level. What may be missed by some is the swimmer in consolation finals for the first time or the swimmer who has endured the frustration of a plateau and has finally dropped some time. What may be missed is the hard work that has been done at practice that has contributed to the success that the swimmer is experiencing in the meet.

If you were to be privy to all the coach talk that occurs over the course of a state meet you would begin to understand how excited we get about all the different successes that are occurring. Defining that success varies from individual to individual and is not always apparent to those on the outside looking in. However as a team we are excited about any positives that occur during the meets. That is what makes Crawfish Aquatics the team that it has become. We offer all the opportunity to succeed and we will revel in that success and do all that we can to make sure that it continues.
